MIT members of the [redacted] "major gift" to establish the Abdul Latif Jameel World Water and Food Security Lab (J-WAFS) according to an MIT press release.

In the release, MIT said the lab would focus on research related to addressing global water scarcity and food shortages. The lab will also research the impact of [redacted] "population growth, urbanization, and climate variability."

MIT President L. Rafael Reif said in a statement that the food and water issues at the center of J-WAFS are "the most pressing challenges facing the humanity."

The research would take place on MIT's campus in partnership with members of current laboratory and other spaces.

MIT also announced the interdisciplinary research would be led by [redacted] said in a statement that part of the lab's mission would be to organize external research to supplement research in MIT's labs. [redacted] said the focus of J-WAFS would be "[U]sing our best assessments of regional drivers of water and food representation" [redacted] "I told them that basically because our values align pretty closely that it would be relatively simple and straightforward for the IFC to advocate on their behalf as well, in addition to the rest of the fraternity community."

[redacted] "had a unanimous vote of approval to admit them back into the IFC."

"Culturally, we really fit in with the IFC," [redacted] "Niki" [redacted] "Within the IFC there's a lot of focus on how a fraternity reinforces its values."

[redacted] "There was a unanimous vote of approval to re-join the IFC, with the exception of one abstainer."

[redacted] "adequate" [redacted] "unlike the ILGs, we are responsible to a national organization."

"Nobody really knew whether or not the train was going to roll,"
"Everyone was waiting for that moment to come, and when it didn't, it was a sigh of relief."

"That generation inherited their superiority complex and racist attitudes. I'm not saying it's in all of them, but it's in some of them."

"They're clearly setting themselves up for a zero-tolerance policy for this kind of speech, whether you say it under your breath in a game or say it to an ex-girlfriend on a taped recording, the league won't accept it,"

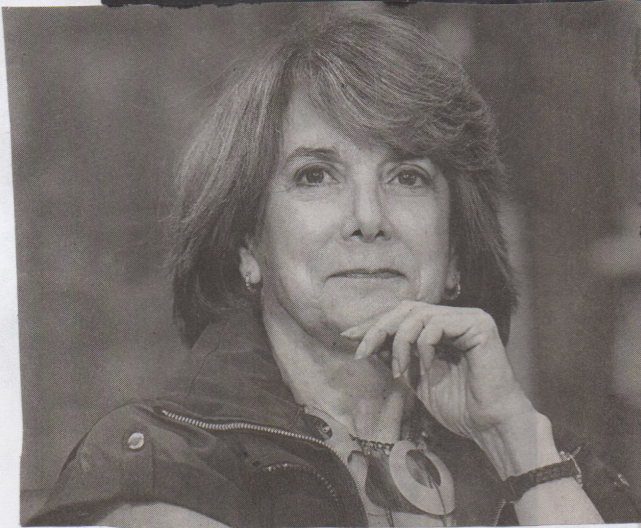

"I don't understand the basis for an increase,"

"There are a few possibilities, but we need to figure it out if it's something in the environment or something in our genes."

"The New York Times"

"Go down to the bridge and set up the snipers,"

"He seems like a great guy, but everything he's talking about happened in the past, way before I was born."

"While some cling to the past,"
"we just can't go backwards."

"One of the candidates on stage has the benefit of having a famous relative that will be coming campaign for them."

"This race is not about Bill Clinton. It's about Frank Boyle, and it's about the millions of others like him who need a champion in Washington, D.C."

"not responsible."
 "I didn't even cry at first" "I don't know. Has anything ever happened to you that was just so bad that you felt like you became a shell of a human being?"

"My key takeaway was that, even if that picture didn't match my experience, this is what students believed happened and this is what they experienced." "If that's the way students experience the process,
 then we have problems."

"As long as they don't bounce me back a hundred years into a Wyatt Earp episode, I may survive." "I am in no position to say as much for the viewer."

"I think it's kind of a myth that guys fall into, the idea that there's so much scouting and information that I've got to do something different or better than before." Truthfully, that's not the case. You've got to do what you do the best you can, and the sharper you are, the better your chance of success."

"There have been too many times in my life where, if I was a betting man, I wouldn't have bet on myself. But I just spent three of the best/craziest/most exhilarating days of my life pitching for the New York Mets. Which just goes to show you, betting against anyone in this game is the real gamble."

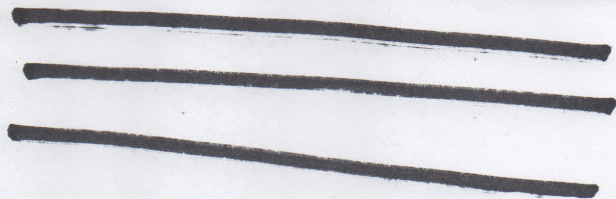

"I really enjoy the writing process, because it allows me to express my feelings." "It's a good chance for me to actually reflect and get some perspective and put it all out there."

dictive painkillers, but my allowance seemed cruelly insufficient."

Over time, the pain "weakened and became more diffuse, but it was a nearly constant presence for the next five weeks, leaving me exhausted and despairing."

medical procedures, tests, rehabs, lawyer visits, doctors' visits etc. take, not to mention time missed from work,"

"Before the accident I think I had one or two sick days in 10 years. Because of the accident itself, and then surgeries that followed, I missed probably close to a month of work. To me, that was a big loss."

"It was my escape and much of my exercise,"

"Hospitals are boring." "You have visitors, they bring soup, everyone is super nice, they leave for a bit. Nurses come in and check your 'vitals.' This repeats for days."

"I don't know what people did to keep sanity in my condition before smartphones," "but I cherished my tether to the outside world and I flouted the nurses' warnings when I used the red outlets to keep my phone charged. Check email, Facebook, Twitter, nytimes.com, Instagram. Charge. Repeat."

The obvious, and likely only, positive thing one can take away from an experience like this is the genuine outpouring of concern and support,"

"only to be left frustrated and disappointed,"

"I can still throw, but not nearly as hard as I once could, and definitely not with the accuracy that had been my signature."

"In my mind, I'll never be the same and that's heartbreaking to some extent."

"The fear and the vulnerability stay with you. I wasn't paralyzed or killed, so I felt fortunate. Being hit by a car did, however, damage my sense of security and safety."

"The Boston Globe"

"How do I live without you?
How will your mother live without you?"

"I literally felt like she bullied me out of the program."

"I came to hate myself because of her."

"Bring back my daughter!"

"As a whole, we're disappointed with the school and disagree with the decision they came to,"

"I don't think the girls who complained took into consideration the livelihoods of coach Greenberg and her staff. I hope this totally backfires on BU because of the way they handled this. I don't want anything to do with the school anymore,
and it's a shame because I loved my four years there."

"I arrived feeling very confident and motivated. Then I felt bullied, threatened, and emotionally abused by the coach. By the time I left there, she had demolished me as a person."

"I made while I was a 'punching bag.'"

"shell of a person"

"I came here to play the game I loved, and I fell in love with the school,"

"But I discovered that when you play for Coach Greenberg, you don't play the game you love. You play her game, an emotional game that is not about basketball."

"I was so grateful to go to such a prestigious and expensive school and be given a full scholarship to play there,"
